was ample opportunity for advancement, and where the salary to begin with was $1,200.00. THE AMERICAN ORGANIST received the call and was unable to fill the position because its readers had not recorded their needs with its Service Department. For every vacancy in every church and theater in America there is at least one organist who knows about it in advance—unless the employers be disreputable in their dealings with their employees, in which case this magazine will not recommend any organist for the position—and if every organist who knows of a vacancy, and every other organist who desires a new position or wishes to make a change, would file such information post haste in the office of THE AMERICAN ORGANIST, where ample equipment and stenographic assistance are constantly available for the service of its readers, much good could be accomplished in every way.

In an early issue THE AMERICAN ORGANIST will print an exceptionally vital article on The Status of American Composition by Hope Leroy Baumgartner, Mus.Bac., associate professor of organ and theory in Yale University School of Music. Mr. Baumgartner has made a close and thorough study of his subject, and has penned his words only after very careful deliberation. He offers a plan which, if accepted and acted upon, would do more for American composition than anything yet undertaken.
